

Endpoint Management Vendor Doubles 2009 Revenue for France

Six major French financial firms, OSEO and a major managed service provider purchased Promisec's IT software solution to simplify and streamline efforts to comply with increasing security regulations and standards

Paris, March 9, 2010: Promisec Inc., a leader in Clientless Endpoint Management (CEM), announced today a doubling of its revenue for France in 2009, contributing to the company's numerous successes in other major markets.

The company's wins in France include major firms in the financial sector (Euler, Sofinco, Natixis, Credit Agricole Titres) as well as Advens, an MSP, and French governmental institutions including OSEO, the French Agency for Innovation.

Regulations and standards for organizations have become more and more complex in today's network environment as both private and public sector enterprises are under increasing pressure to strictly enforce compliance. Organizations therefore have started to strengthen control mechanisms within their internal networks using innovative clientless solutions.

Promisec's Clientless Endpoint Management (CEM) technology enables organizations to adhere to complex compliance regulations and standards with incredible accuracy and speed. Promisec simplifies and streamlines this historically complicated auditing and enforcement process. With an automated, easy-to-use tool for the monitoring and remediation of all endpoints and servers in the network, the CISO can save money and resources while maintaining the continuity of the business.

"One of the major advantages of Promisec CEM is that it is a lightweight technology that does not rely on heavy endpoint agents to enforce compliance," said Hilik Kotler, EVP Business Development and Co-Founder, Promisec.
